Brief Therapy with Individuals and Couples

Edited by Jon Carlson, Psy.D., Ed.D., and Len Sperry, M.D., Ph.D.

"This groundbreaking book addresses a major need of almost all practicing therapists: efficacious brief therapy. Representing a wide range of counseling perspectives, the contributors to the book explain, with the help of familiar clients, how therapy can be shortened using their particular approach. The value of this book is in its clarity and detail. Practitioners may select practices that are compatible with their own beliefs and immediately put them to use in their offices. If you are in practice, this is a book you should not miss."

--William Glasser, M.D., Author of Reality Therapy in Action

Now, setting a new standard for publishing in the area of brief therapy, Brief Therapy with Individuals and Couples is a comprehensive sourcebook that brings together the most effective strategies and interventions--across orientations--for time-effective treatment of individuals and couples. Each strategy is carefully described and then clearly illustrated with clinical case materials.

The chapter authors include 20 of today's leaders in the field of brief therapy, with Frank Dattilio, Michael Hoyt, Francine Shapiro, Luciano L'Abate, Arnold Lazarus, Wade Luquet, Leigh McCullough, Scott Miller, and David Scharff among them. Nowhere will one find clearer information and guidance about how to actually apply strategies -- cognitive-behavioral, multimodal, constructivist, Ericksonian, psychodynamic, psychoeducational, and pharmacological -- in day-to-day clinical practice.

Unique both in its scope and its sharp clinical focus, Brief Therapy with Individuals and Couples will prove an invaluable resource for all clinicians seeking to maximize not just their clients' time, but also their own. Readers across the field will benefit from Carlson and Sperry's decision to gather and distill the most clinically pertinent information regarding the most promising treatment strategies into a single, well-organized, case-filled volume.
